

Experience Mazatlan's Friendly and Affordable Lifestyle

It is that time of year once again, when many Canadians start to head back to Mazatlan for another season. There are many reasons why Canadians go back to the city each year that go beyond the weather, the championship golf courses, the beach, the marina and the great deep-sea fishing that the port has to offer. There are a myriad of sports, social activities and cultural events that make-up Mazatlan's friendly and affordable lifestyle.

Lifestyle

If you have only been to Mazatlan for a week or two at a time, you really ought to consider staying for a full season. You will have the opportunity to experience the Pacific League's baseball season; the golf, fishing and tennis tournaments; the world's third largest Carnaval (Mardigras); the Mazatlán Arts Festival; the bull fighting season; the annual International Pacific Marathon and Triathlon; and the annual Motorcycle Week; among other activities. These events take place between October and May.

Many Canadians who stay for the entire season also donate their time to various charitable organizations. In fact, some of these organizations were started by the Canadian and American residents of Mazatlan.

If you haven't traveled to Mazatlan in a few years, you'll be amazed when you go to the historical center of town. Most of the area has been renovated to reflect its architectural past with colorful facades. There are more restaurants than ever where you can enjoy delicious meals, as well as the outdoor music and dancing that takes place at the Plazuela Machado. There is a long list of cultural events that take place in the plaza as well as in the Angela Peralta Theater, which is a cultural icon itself.

Friendly

One of the best features of the city is that the Mexican, Canadian and American residents (and visitors) share all that the destination has to offer. Mazatlan is a working city with a thriving community, but remains a place where most activities are in close proximity and you always get the feeling that everybody knows each other.

In order to take full advantage of longer visits and spending time with friends, Canadians have been investing in recreational property in Mazatlán for decades; but have been doing so in much larger numbers in the past three years. With lots, condos, homes and villas available in different price ranges, Mazatlan has something for everyone.

Affordable

Mazatlan's recreational property continues to be more affordable than that of other Mexican destinations, and property taxes are very low. These features, along with its privileged location, have caused demand from Canadians to rise significantly. Mazatlan has truly become an investment hotspot as well as a lifestyle destination.
